

Athletics launches upgraded website

Corban's athletic department began its partnership with Internet Consulting Services, Inc. (ICS) last month and launched the all-new gowarriorsgo.com website. The site features a new look and enhanced features.

In mid-August, Corban's Sports Information Office, in conjunction with the athletic department and college administration, signed a three-year contract with the Syracuse-based website design company.

Current ICS clients include fellow Cascade Collegiate Conference members Warner Pacific College, Northwest Christian University, and Southern Oregon University. The Portland-based conference also became an ICS client with the launch of its website in February.

"I am very pleased with the product and services that ICS offers to collegiate athletic departments," says Corban's Director of Athletics, John Nelson. "Their features dramatically enhance the overall look and functionality of the website. Warrior fans will appreciate the added information about all of our sports and athletes. It's a real plus for our department."

Warrior fans will now enjoy many new features to help them track their favorite Corban teams. They will have the ability to see contest outcomes with an all-new scrolling scoreboard and know all upcoming events on a monthly basis via its calendar feature. In addition, fans will soon have the capability of getting up-to-date scores and news sent straight to their cell phones. An exciting technological feature will be allowing fans to catch live, pay-per-view video action of all home volleyball and basketball games on their computers.
